

Abstract

The object of the present invention is to provide an improved balloon catheter for curing aneurysms, and particularly dissecting aortic aneurysms, promptly and without surgical treatment, the therapeutic appliance for treating dissecting aortic aneurysms comprising providing a stretchable bag-like element on and along the end portion of a catheter, the bag-like element being in the form of a flat film when not holding a fluid inside and in the form of a tube when holding a fluid inside, and the inside film and outside film that compose the bag-like element are partially joined.

205120 2059001